

Dancing With Myself

The social etiquette for dancing with yourself is actually simple: the older version of 'you' leads. There are three reasons for this. First off, when it comes to the endless chaos that is time travel you need all the consistent rules that you can get. Second, the older version of you has already been through the dance once already, so he knows the steps.

The third reason, of course, is that when the time-ninja show up the older 'you' can quickly spin the younger 'you' around and throw you right at the ninja. Why not? You know that you'll survive...
