

Permanent Houseguests

I suppose that theoretically the planet Earth has been conquered by aliens. I mean, they descended en masse from their ships, brushed past all of our defenses, and moved in wherever they wanted. So, hey: alien invasion, right?

But... they don't seem to want anything from us. It's like we've been invaded by friendly cats who can raid the refrigerator on their own and change their own litter-boxes. I mean, I have three living in the basement right now, and they have yet to give me an order. It's almost insulting.

Well. At least their taste in pizza is atrocious.
