

Tears in Rain

Some people searched for Cibola, or the ruins of Atlantis. I went looking for the Tannhauser Gate. Why? Because it doesn't exist, of course.

I learned well from Odysseus's failure, you see. I needed to search for something that didn't exist, because if it existed, I could find it. And if I could find it, I could not become the Eternal Traveler. And, of course, if I did not become the Eternal Traveler, I could not become a god.

But then I found the damned place anyway.

Still, you know something? Roy Batty was right. It was something to see.
