

Long Term Plans

We expected colonizing this planet would be difficult. Which is called 'Verdant Spring,' by the way. The planet let us know that, about six months in.

So: the planet's alive! And it couldn't wait to get its own sapient species. Verdant Spring has been falling all over itself to give our colony every possible advantage; and, now that it's figured out how to communicate, we are blowing through our checklist. We'll be ready for orbital infrastructure in ten years, not two hundred.

Yeah, Verdant Spring really wants orbital infrastructure. It'll need it for the space empire we'll apparently be building.
