

They've Got Their Reasons, Trust Me

Adelaide was damper than I expected. “It rains here often?” I asked my partner Hana. “And is it because of the...”

“...the Grail?” She grinned. “Yes to the first, Barb, at least in June. But no to the second. The Grail being here’s done nothing to the local climate. They think.”

I shivered, a little. Partially it was because of the weather. I knew June was winter down here, but I wasn’t expecting it to be cool. And then there was the other thing: “We’re really doing this?”

Hana laughed. “Stealing the Grail? We better: I didn’t buy trip insurance!”
