

Punching the time clock

Time travel? Impossible, of course. But not because it cannot be done. It can be. It just simply never is done - well, not permanently. What happens is, every time somebody creates a time machine he goes out and merrily changes history... right up to the point where the time machine never gets made in the first place.

Then: poof! Time traveler and machine? Out like a light. Usually all that's left are whatever anachronisms or artifacts that won't spark another attempt to achieve time travel.

But there still can be money in those items. Which is where I come in...
