

Heads-or-Jail.

"Cloning wasn't the problem," I explained. "Cloning and brain-taping? That's the problem." I poured more coffee. "See, when you have another version of you wandering around, it's easy to see the criminal angles in it. Like... go rob a store, then 'blame' your clone. Why not? He'll 'blame' you right back."

The reporter nodded. "And if you don't know who did it..."

"...a smart lawyer could get reasonable doubt every time." I shrugged. "So that's why we do coin tosses to determine guilt."

"I never understood why the Supreme Court signed off on that."

"Nobody likes a smart-ass. Or asses."
