

Magic

Magic is simple. It doesn't work properly, but it's simple. It's best to understand it as a piece of legacy code from the previous universe: when you 'cast a spell' you are simply temporarily superimposing the previous cosmos' laws of physics on our own. And here's the cool part: anybody can do it.

The trick is to do it and remember. The old laws snap back really quickly, for one thing. For another, the universe tends to deal with incompatible laws of physics by simply erasing the event from history.

But, you. You managed to work magic, and remember it. Welcome!
