

Inside Knowledge

“I want,” I repeated, “to copyright my soul.”

The lawyer fiddled with her pen. “That seems... unusual,” she eventually replied. “I’m not sure if it can even be done.”

“Oh, it can be done. The question is, will it be taken seriously? I want to define my soul as being an original work of mine, currently fixed in my body. Can you write that up?”

“...Yes. But it wouldn’t stop you from being executed for a capital crime.”

“Farthest thing from my mind,” I said truthfully. Just don’t ask me about the PsycheTwin IPO that’s about to be announced...
