

Green-Purple-Black Box Blues

It turns out, magic is taste-based. Isn't that just a kick in the teeth?

Fortunately, we're not the first species in the Firmament - what our grandparents called 'the Galaxy' - to have that particular problem. There are ways to convert arcane sensory data into something that our brains can process better. They're not great, though, except to help a few gourmands and epicureans with their magic.

Like the other non-magical species, we make do. Most humans use magic via pre-programmed spellboxes. Less flexibility, but at least we can crank the power up on spells we do use. As in, a lot.
