Ghosts aren't real. Just ask any of them. I know it's a contradiction, but you'll get used to those showing up all the time.

Much like ghosts, really: they're sort of like spiritual homeopathy. A spirit is essentially the hollow mold of a human soul after it Goes On. Stuff can pour into that mold, creating an imperfect psychic copy of the original. You end up with something with sapience, but no will, because volition is apparently something almost unique to souls.

The problem is the 'almost.' Some soul-substitutes can emulate volition. And that can lead to a... complicated... result.
