

Trading Up

It always seemed a shame to me how we would simply eliminate would-be Dark Lords. So many of those people had laudable personal qualities! They had drive, industry, project management skills - all misdirected, yes, but still valuable.

Then I had my epiphany: what if the problem wasn't that they craved conquest, but that they were conquering the wrong places? That's where I come in. I find them ethical targets, places where their New Order or whatever would be a genuine improvement on current local conditions... oh, I see you've just perked up.

Exactly. Things really are that messed up here.
