

All In

Everybody in the Galaxy has 'poker.' Supposedly it was a gift from the Progenitors, back when they burst into an empty cosmos, and seeded the worlds with sapient life. One thing they taught all the species they uplifted was how to play cards.

At least, that's what some of the wilder historians and archeologists claim. Others argue that card games are just one of those things that sapient do, along with finding patterns where there aren't any. Parallel evolution and unrestrained romanticism just makes more sense as an explanation.

Besides, nobody's ever been able to find the mythical planet 'Texas.'
