

The Fight Music of the Spheres

Galaxies fight each other. We just don't see it happening because we're mayflies from their point of view: individual sophonts are brought into this plane of reality, live our lives, then depart to the next plane. You need to be outside of Time to perceive galactic struggles.

What are the stakes? Why do they fight? Are there 'good' and 'bad' sides, by any reasonable definition? Alas, answering those questions would require a very deep dive into the sensoriums of galaxies. It's not that easy to pull yourself back up from that dive, either. Human souls simply don't process Time well.
