

Yes, It's Messy

Pluck something from the timeline, and you create a Void. It's got the same mass as whatever you've dimensionally shifted, only... negative? Like, if something had a mass of twenty pounds at 1G, the Void starts with a nega-mass of twenty pounds.

The bad news is, nature abhors a Void, so it's constantly trying to search out matter to absorb. The arguably good news is, the Void can only absorb extra-dimensional matter. 'Locals' aren't affected at all.

Why's that only 'arguably' good news? Well, this all means you can use a Void to track extradimensional matter. Or people. Ask them.
