

Cosmic Horror Shouldn't Be This Dull

We've been tracking the Ripple for three weeks. Its epicenter was just outside of Topeka, Kansas, and it's radiating out at a crawl. It's also radiating out as a globe, which at least means it won't ever meet itself.

So what is the Ripple doing? It's the weirdest thing. Inside the Ripple, a certain Franklin Pierce was the 14th President of the United States; outside of it, it's obviously still Lewis Cass. And that's it. History otherwise remains unchanged, except I guess for the statues and stuff.

We don't know what to do, honestly. Or even if we should care.
