

Bean Counting

It was kind of a relief for the Milky Way when the Andromedan war fleets showed up. There were a lot of martial races just standing around, all of us eyeing each other, and wondering when the wars would start over a misunderstanding. Having somebody *e/*se to fight was nice.

Humanity's not in charge of this goat rodeo, by the way. We've been really clear about that. Our job is simply to make sure that everybody has the resources needed to win the war. That's our special genius, so there's no need to worry. Everything will work out fine.

Everything.
