

No, Really, Never You Mind

There are a lot fewer dryads than you think. Well, if you think of us at all. We try very hard to keep most humans from believing in us again.

The way it works is, all trees are trees. As in, every Quercus alba tree is also every other Quercus alba tree. So a white oak dryad can jump from white oak to white oak, anywhere on Earth. The trip isn't instantaneous, but it's pretty fast. A skilled dryad can get from Maine to Texas in no more than an hour.

Never you mind what we use that trick for!
