

An Increasingly Protracted Rearguard Action

Yeah, it was weird to notice that at some point I had just... died. In my defense, it wasn't immediately obvious! The enemy was using grenades, which still hurt.

Well, fine, I thought they hurt. It was really just pressure. But you get up from a blast, your head feels funny, but no bits are gone, then it's just a mild concussion, right?

Nope! I'm dead. And apparently mostly bulletproof. Oh, I feel like that something can still kill-kill me - but whatever it is, the enemy didn't bring any of it along.

Which is really starting to suck for them.
